Dear Grandma, I'm kind of sad that you won't be here for my Graduation, or my birthday/ Lana's wedding. You promised me you would be at my graduation. But you weren't mine, you were Gods. I miss you so much grandma that words can't even describe the feeling. I love you Love Kamille,

One of my memories of my Grandma, is telling her everything that happend at school that day. She would often visit me after basketball practice and she would say " are you hungry baby" and i would respond with a yes and we would spend hours in Walmart and we would get ice cream Or when we would go to a garage sale and she would start making friends with the person selling and get half off

One of my fondest memories of Ma was.. when I first started tutoring @PEM and ALL the kids & most adults calling her "grandma".. and I really thought all these kids were hers because everyone was tied to someone there (IYKYK).. I used to tease her that she was trying to beat Abraham by having children of many nations 🙄🙄 I remember asking her & Aunty Nani once if they really were all her babies & babies' babies and they laughed for so many days before telling me half of them were just students with no ties to the family 😂😂 and the other half really is all hers 😂😂 she had the best sense of humor and truly saw the light in everything and everyone.. her love for our Lord & Savior was exemplified with every soul who came into contact with her and not just the youth, but, especially the adults. She loved everyone deeply and she never thought anyone was too far gone for redemption through Christ, and thus, many became her hanai kids who lovingly call her "grandma Muri" (as my kids did from childhood well into their adulthood) and "Ma" (as I affectionately do).Dear Ma, ..the flesh misses you & mourns your absence dearly.. the world has lost such a beautiful and precious gem amongst God's elite. My spirit finds comfort in knowing that because of your great love for the Master, that this is not the end and will remember to rejoice at your reunion with the Lord. Thank you, for remembering me and coming to say goodbye before your spirit returned to the Father.. I'm looking forward to your warm embrace in heaven 🙏🙏💜💜 #Until_Rapture
